

The Circle Way

a Method to Transform our Meetings & Be Responsive to Trauma, Conflict & Shadow in our Work & in Our Communities

February 1 & 2, 2017 • New York City • 9:30am - 4:30pm

co-sponsored by THE WORKSHOPS and The Center for Trauma-Informed Practice at Good Shepherd Services

- creating healthy team relationships
- addressing stuck conversations and conflict
- making difficult decisions
- hearing each person's voice and perspective
- being bold and creative
- embracing diverse viewpoints
- moving beyond a "check-in"
- working with complexity
- building capacity
- healing trauma

The Circle Way is a methodology that supports inclusive meetings, groups and conversations that welcome diverse opinions, promote mutual understanding, and discover meaningful and wise solutions. In this workshop we will demonstrate the components of circle as a way to create an environment and container for working together that is productive and intentional. The principles and practices of The Circle Way offer the safety needed to encourage genuine contribution and creativity. The experiential design of the workshop will foster our capacity to handle uncertainty, complexity, conflict, hurt and trauma. We will explore the practical range of applications of The Circle Way including regular meetings, social group work, community engagement gatherings, and more. We will also focus on how to use The Circle Way in decision making; to clear the 'shadow' that emerges in groups and organizations; and to be responsive to traumatic events in our communities.

Who Should Attend

Leaders, managers, supervisors, project leaders, community groups, youth workers, educators, board members, and those working in fields such as:

- social work

HOSTING TEAM:

Amanda Fenton has a background in human resources, learning design, and leadership and management development. She is an experienced designer and facilitator of meetings, gatherings, conferences and more, using participatory dialogue processes to cultivate the connections and collective intelligence needed to address the complex situations we face today. She's a group process artist who draws from methods such as Open Space Technology, World Cafe, The Circle Way, Collective Story Harvest and others.

Nancy Fritsche Eagan, LMSW, consults in leadership and organizational development initiatives. She partners primarily with the social sector and uses Art of Hosting tools and technologies to co-design and co-facilitate conversations that focus on purpose, process, results, and impact. She practices The Circle Way, appreciative inquiry, open space, world café, storytelling, project management and other participatory and engagement tools. Nancy is Senior Facilitator at Good Shepherd Services, a member at Center for Social Innovation, and on the board of The Circle Way.

Mayra Lopez, LMSW, is Director of Trauma-Informed Programming at Good Shepherd Services in NYC. She has worked in the social services and education fields for over 25 years. She designs and hosts trauma-based trainings and provides consultation and coaching to programs and multi-disciplinary staff on trauma-based interventions. She is a practitioner of the Art of Hosting and The Circle Way.
